IS FUNNIEST EVER MUTH PRESS CLUB SHOW

As Finally Prepared the Manuscript Calls For a Laugh Every Minute.

FULL DETAILS OF THE PLOT.

It is Original and the Scene is Laid At Jordan's Crossing on the Saltair Road.

Every newspaper writer encounters facts in his day which for one reason and another are refused admittance to the columns of his paper. Occasionally the good stories that are never told in print accumulate about the various paper offices till they simply demand an outlet.

Hence the Press Club shows, and the press writers who will hold forth at the Salt Lake theater next Thursday evening have prepared a program which is guaranteed by the actors to produce more screams of laughter to the minute than any performance ever seen here. To them at least it is funny, for they are "wised" on the situations they burlesque, and if the audience partakes equally of this wisdom there should be an altogether amusing evening.

The play is the third in a series of duennial performances. First came 'ncle Tom's cabin for its contribution of amusing situations that were capa-ble of local interpretation, and in this show "Long John" Critchlow sprang into fame as the greatest "Little Eva"

THE HAM SHOW

Following that performance came ar invasion into Shakespeare with the "Ham Show." It used all the local situations of the day, and first discovered P. J. Moran to the public Last year, when a show was first discussed, the rural melodrama was hit upon as a fit subject, and it was deided to work up something with an original plot but embodying the stock kirke." "Way Down East" and tear stained school of commotional writings. Out of the discussion grew the title "The Old Bedstead" and Waldemar Young seized on it at once, with Race Whitney as just the thing around which to build a play. The plot as they worked it out is as follows:

A HEAVY PLOT.

Once upon a time in the little village of Jordan's Crossing lived Josiah bbs, a prosperous miller who had beautiful daughter. Gwendoline. Next to his daughter Josiah treasured an old bedstead. This was a family heirloom. Among the many sultors for his daughter's hand was a brawny blacksmith, Arthur Trewellan. They were happy in their early courtship but clouds descending upon Josiah threatened to mar the future lives of

The first shadow was the appearance in the village of Pearsford Sope, a lord and promoter. He had discovered the secret of making denaturalized alcohol from the pulp of sugar beets. On a former visit to the village he had secured a large part of pros-Sope's plot now was to obtain possession of the Stubb's farm to grow possession of the further pur-pose of securing financial backing in the village. Josiah, nowever, remembering his former experience was sus-pleious of the promoter. Having been scorned Sope now approaches Squire Kettleson, the wealthiest and "crustiest" native, whose hatred for Josiah was a matter of common knowledge. Kettleson enters into a plat with Sope to break Josiah's heart by obtaining possession of the old bedstead, the nost treasured heirloom in the Stubbs This Kettleson can do for he holds a mortgage on the bedstead se cured in an election bet years before Kettleson agrees to foreclose the mortgage and advance Sope money with which to purchase the bedstead at the Kettleson had not foreclosed before because Josiah was so popular in the village that nobody would bid on the bedstead had it been offered at auction. The plot thickens!

POLITICS ENTER.

Trewellan by running on the ticket which lost Stubbs his heirloom loses the old man's favor. Both he and the girl are driven from the Stubbs home a blinding snow-storm. Gwendoline goes to the city and is forced to earn living selling violets in the streets of Fountain Green.
Bid Dubbs, Josiah's chore-boy, and Sue Brette go to the city on a trip. While there they try to find Gwendoline but meet Sope instead. Sope informs Bid that he is out of money and money he must have. Sope asks Bid to hold up a train, promising to reward him, not with congratulations alone but by finding Gwendoline for him. Bid in his eagerness to find Gwendoline half promises to hold up the train and agrees to meet Sope later.

THE PLOT THICKENS

In another and more blinding snowstorm Gwendoline meets Sope and de-nounces him but the villian sneers and is unmoved by the beautiful girl's impassioned words. Another dash of passioned words. Another thickening:

Bid Dubbs keeps his engagement with Sope and the train robbery is planned. It comes off on time.
Sope is still pursuing Stubbs and by a stroke of master finance secures the money to purchase the Old Bed-

The picking of a cast has proved no easy matter. Some of the old veterans who made good reputations in previous Pres club plays were not available, and new material was given its opportunity. WHAT CAMPBELL SAYS

With Reference to the Work of Repaving.

Manager Campbell of the Utah Light & Railway company says relative to the repaying at the intersection of Main and First and Second South, and West Temple and First and Second South streets; that it was understood that the work on the West Temple street intersections only should be attempted this year, so that the company would not be required to do the work on Main street intersections at present. particularly in view of the geat amount of work the company is to do elsewhere. So the company is proceeding with the West Temple street work with all possible dispatch, and as the steel frogs and curves are at hand, there need be no delay. But in the matter of the Main street curves and frogs, the company is re-ceiving bids for the steel curves and frogs which will cost in the neighborhood of $29,000, and the equipment will be ready to lay down early in the year. Mr. Campbell remarked today, that the city was ready to pave only 20 blocks aged to find the where the company is ready to do its dancing and a share of the work for 40 blocks. He loned reunion.

paving, as it would be a great deal cheaper than asphalt, but the latter "went" with the board of public orks, and the company will accept the situation. The company will do con siderable underground work in the matter of burying electric light and power wires, so that the entire street improvements contemplated mean an outlay for the Utah Light & Railway company of

Did you, sleepless one, ever trp a dish of GRAPE-NUTS and CREAM just before bed?

Sure you never did or you wouldn't train with the "sleepless squad."

IT'S A BAD PRACTICE to load up the stomach with a promising variety of rich, indigestible food at night because it "tastes" good.

STRENGTH WITHOUT BULK is a requirement of an idea food for the last bite before going to bed. The food that is concentrated so that a sufficient amount for all purposes will not distend the stomach: the food that is practically predigested so the organs can, without undue effort, absorb it wholly; the food that contains the tissue-repairing and energy-making elements from clean field grains—that contains the phosphate of Potash which combines, by vital process, with Albumen to re-pair the gray matter in brain and nerve centers—that's

UTAH'S DIGNIFIED STATE SENATORS

Something of the Men Who Comprise the Membership of The "Upper House."

THE CHANGES OF THIS YEAR.

Retrospective View of the Hobbies of Each at Last Session and What They Were.

When the legal documents are drawn up against violators of the law, there is a clause which speaks of the peace and dignity of the State of Utah.

Just where this dignity most centers within the state, may be an unanswerable question, but the upper house of the Utah legislature, when it sits in due formality at the 18 desks of the senate chamber, makes a strong bid for the honor. Like the upper house of the national legislature the senate stands for its dignity in a very self conscious manner, and soon after the next election day is past, there will be nine new senators applying to nine wiser and older ones for information about how to draw up bills, how to address the chairman, and how to manipulate the task of being a dignifled senatorial member, with a regu-lation condescending manner towards the lower house on the upper floor

Nineteen months ago the Sixth senate adjourned in the midst of a heated debate on the consolidation question and the appropriation bill. Of the and the appropriation bill. 18 senators who sat in that session, three were Democrats, and they all retire with the coming election day. the other 15 who are Republicans, six are lost, and that leaves a solid delegation of nine Republican members to occupy the senior seats. This, of course, provided new men fill the places of the retiring members, but it is an old senatorial tradition that some senators serve on regardless of changes in other offices, and retiring senators are already in the field for re-election. Barber of Cache is considering the matter of trying it again on the Democratic ticket, while Larsen of Sanpete is a candidate for reelection on the Republican ticket.

THOSE WHO GO.

The nine men who leave are Barber of Logan, McKay of Weber, Williams and Bamberger of Salt Lake, Gardner of Spanish Fork, Loose of Provo, Larsen of Manti. Lewis of Frisco, and Ben nion of Vernal.

The taking away of these men from the judiciary service will leave various vacancies according to the interests which each represent in the senate, and the specialties upon which they were at work. Every senator has something that is more or less of a hobby. Walton for instance, confessed on the floor of the last senate that he ran for office and was elected, with the one ambition of getting the land laws fixed up. When he was made chairman of the committee on public lands he strangled a dozen prospective land laws to death, and put forward the document which went into effect as the work of his own brain and heart Walton remains, so the land laws will have plenty of attention.

those that go many memories long remain. Bennion will be will long remain. much missed by his colleagues, had a smile that won his way for him, and was so general in his interests that he usually had an idea or two to throw into a bill no matter what the subject, and somehow his ideas seemed to find good lodgings when they were tossed in. More specifically his ser-vice was as watchdog of the typography. While Judge Botkin, now serv-ing Uncle Sam in a foreign isle, was reading in the thunderous tones of the reading clerk, a bill or the minutes, everybody took notice when Bennion interposed an objection, and then they got busy with their fountain pens to mark the typographical correction he suggested, in their desk copies. He was conceded to be a past grand master in the arts of spelling, punctua-tion, and grammar, and what he said on these subjects was allowed to go without question.

GOSSIP OF THE SENATE.

In the problems before the senate Bennion led conspicuously in only one, and curiously enough his bitterest opponent in this was his Democratic colleague, Barber from Cache. When consolidation matters first came up Bennion spoke for a scrap to a finish, said he knew it was coming, and want ed everybody to take off his silk gloves and wade in with bare hands. Later in the game Steve Love, from the president's chair, became an aggressive leader in this same fight, and proposed some of the measures that went down to defeat by two votes in the last heated hours. In those days Lawrence usually relieved Love in the self, but Love and Lawrence are both still there to carry on the law making in their particular lines of interest Lawrence as an authority on judicial matters and the constitution, and Love as an enemy of all "machine" measures that appear to be stuffed, and corporation bills that seem to favor the "in-

THE LEADERS.

Six men in the last senate loomed up as leaders in aggressiveness, and gen-eral legislative acumen. They were love, Lawrence, and Hollingsworth, and the three "busy bees" on the south end of the circle of desks, Bamberger, Barber and Bennion. Three of them remain, while there are good vacancies for others to fill in the top notches of senatorial esteem.

Barber, who goes from Cache county, rose to the height of his glory on the consolidation fight. Up to that point oratory had been tabooed, but when the voting time came Barber burst forth with flowers of speech that eclipsed anything previously offered and that even brought applause from fellow speech-makers on the other side of the question. He is a little, sandy haired man, who appeared to have no fight in affairs in general, letting the military bills, and the fish and game bills go by without much comment, but getting up a burst of energy on con-solidation that made him one of the most admired of senators.

McKay, who goes from Weber county leaving his young colleague, Hollings-worth, was known as the father of the senate. He was of Utah pioneer stock, breathed honesty and kindness from every line of his venerable countenance, and was always a willing substitute to open with prayer when the regular chaplain was absent. He was the oldest man present, and was fond of telling tales of olden Utah trials, showing ing tales of olden Utah trials, showing how they affected legislation then being considered. He was not a leader on questions of business affairs, but he came rapidly frward when agriculture and farming were under consideration. His hobby was that young men ought to go back to the soil. He deplored education that cultivated a vanity for untoiling hands, and he believed in the dignity of agricultural labor. His committee was that of agriculture and irmittee was that of agriculture and irrigation, and he never tired of drawing up bills to foster his pets.

Williams of Salt Lake was more or less of a silent member, but a good thinker and a hard worker. He is a middle aged man, and for his business ability, was named as chairman of the finance committee. When senators brought in bills carrying money appr priations, Williams quietly applied the ax, and said little about it, unless the money could be spared. At the grand windup, his appropriations bill was the center of fire for a week, and finally when it was some $200,000 over what Gov. Cutler would approve, it was sub-mitted to the governor in conference, where it was decided to leave good old "roads and bridges" in so that no sen-ator could be blamed at home for money lacking in his county. Gov. Cutter was left to use the official scissors on the item without protest.

The two men from Utah county, Gardner and Loose, were very different in their interests. Loose was a mixer with the "boys" and the sergeant-atarms fixed his bill file up so that his desk looked in good order when be ries are well remembered with the in-evitable "huh" at the end of each sen-tence, and also is his executive session stand against Hollingsworth and Love on the matter of approving an exec-utive appointment. This was the one utive appointment. This was the one instance in which he showed that he knew contemporaneously what the senate was doing.

Gardner was the defender of the old comestead. If there was a bill up for extending the rights of eminent domain over water, so that water rights rould be condemned, Gardner was on his feet with fervid expressions about he old fireside and the irrigation dit that grew wood for its fuel, and the wicked city that ought to pay for eve bit of water it gets, and then ought o find the water somewhere else to the streams already in use. was a proposition to repeal the bount on coyotes to prevent wholesale fraud Gardner was there with a defense of the helpless sheep and the sheep herder who ought to be paid for his work it killing coyotes and wild cats. He served on the irrigation committee, the appropriations and claims committee the forests committee, the insurance committee, and was chairman of the committees on salary and labor.

A REFLEX OF LEWIS. Lewis of Frisco, the last of those who leave the senate, made very little of a stir in that body. He began by fall-ing out with his colleagues, and then falling out some more. After that he took a leave of absence and went travcling while the senate did its worl appointments. He didn't like them, and produced a letter of categorical con plaint, in which he resigned from ever last jack one of them. The resignato speak to several bills, and was hop lessly voted down. As the breach wi ened he felt less and less at home. finally simply took refuge in a Pull man car. When he came back near the end of the session his mood was much more in harmony and he joined for a time in the councils of his brother senators. THOSE WHO STAY.

The nine senators who make the basis for the new senate to convene next January are Clegg of Tooele, Wal-ton of Woodruff, Rasband of Park City. Hollingsworth of Weber, Love, Park and Lawrence of Salt Lake, Callister of Fillmore, and Johnson of Circleville
